Carl Quintanilla

Co-Anchor, "Squawk on the Street"; Anchor, "Squawk Alley"; Moderator, "Your Money, Your Vote: The Republican Presidential Debate"; Host, "Binge"

Carl Quintanilla is an Emmy Award-winning reporter and one of the principal anchors of CNBC's "Squawk on the Street," broadcast live from the New York Stock Exchange. In May 2014, Quintanilla was also named anchor of CNBC's "Squawk Alley."

Since joining the network in 1999, Quintanilla has covered a wide range of stories for both CNBC and NBC News, where he was a New York- and Chicago-based correspondent. He has covered the Beijing and London Olympics, the reconstruction of post-war Iraq and the 2004 U.S. presidential campaign. In 2005, he spent weeks in New Orleans as part of NBC's team coverage of Hurricane Katrina, for which he shared a national Emmy, an RTNDA Edward R. Murrow Award and broadcast's highest honor, the Peabody Award.

Quintanilla has reported one-hour documentaries for the network including, "#TwitterRevolution," "The Costco Craze: Inside the Warehouse Giant," "BMW: A Driving Obsession," "Big Mac: Inside the McDonald's Empire," "Trash Inc: The Secret Life of Garbage" and "The Money Chase: Inside Harvard Business School." He is also the correspondent for the CNBC series "Crime Inc."

Prior to joining NBC, Quintanilla spent six years as a reporter for The Wall Street Journal.

Quintanilla earned a bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Colorado.
